Mommy is washing clothes. Kim wants to wash clothes, too.

Mommy uses a washing machine. Kim uses a bowl of sudsy water.

Slop, slosh! Kim washes Carrots's coat.

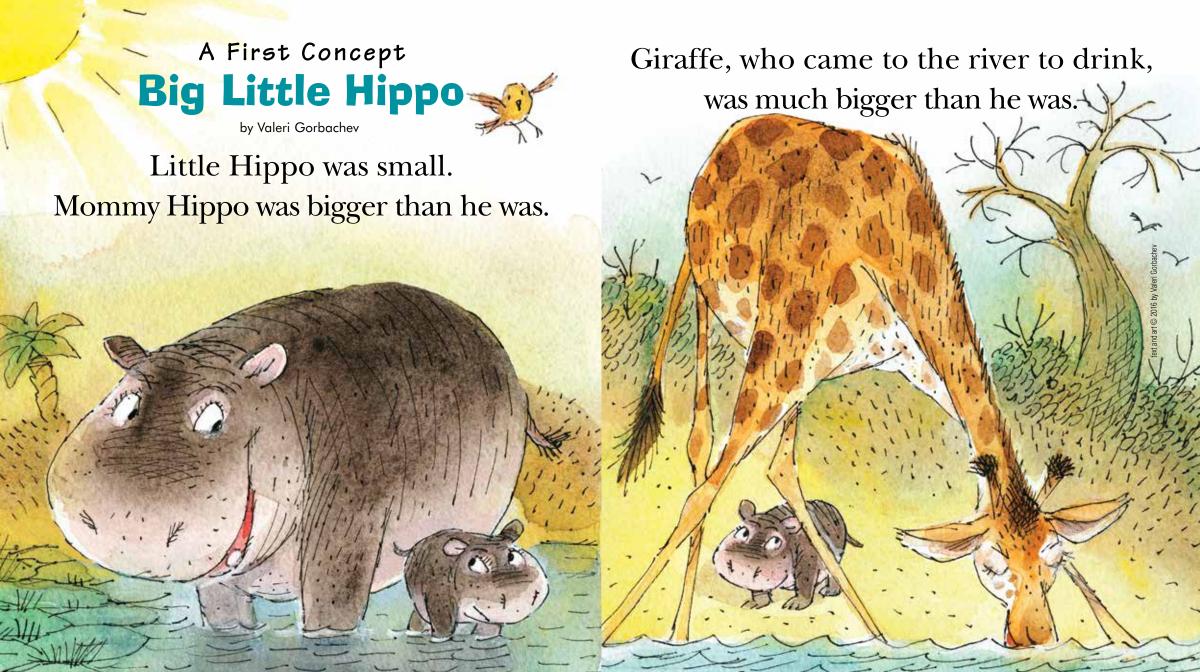

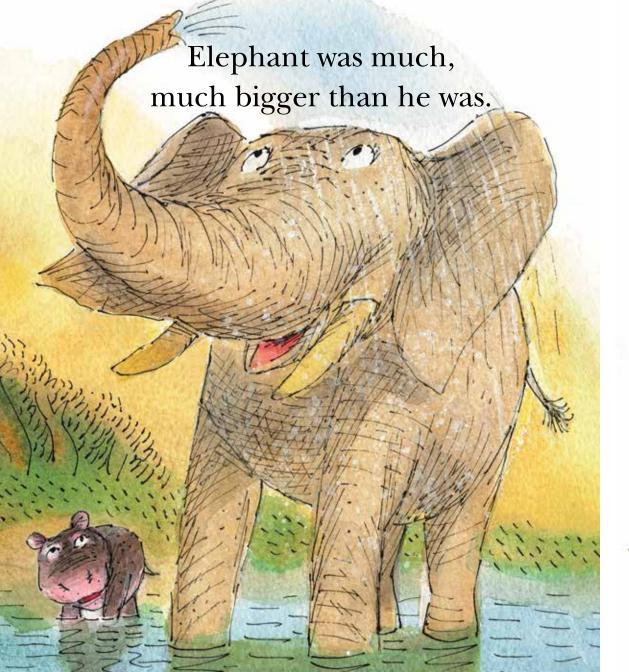

Then Carrots has a sudsy bath, too!

Mommy hangs Carrots on the line to dry in the sunshine.

Mmm! Carrots smells so fresh and clean!

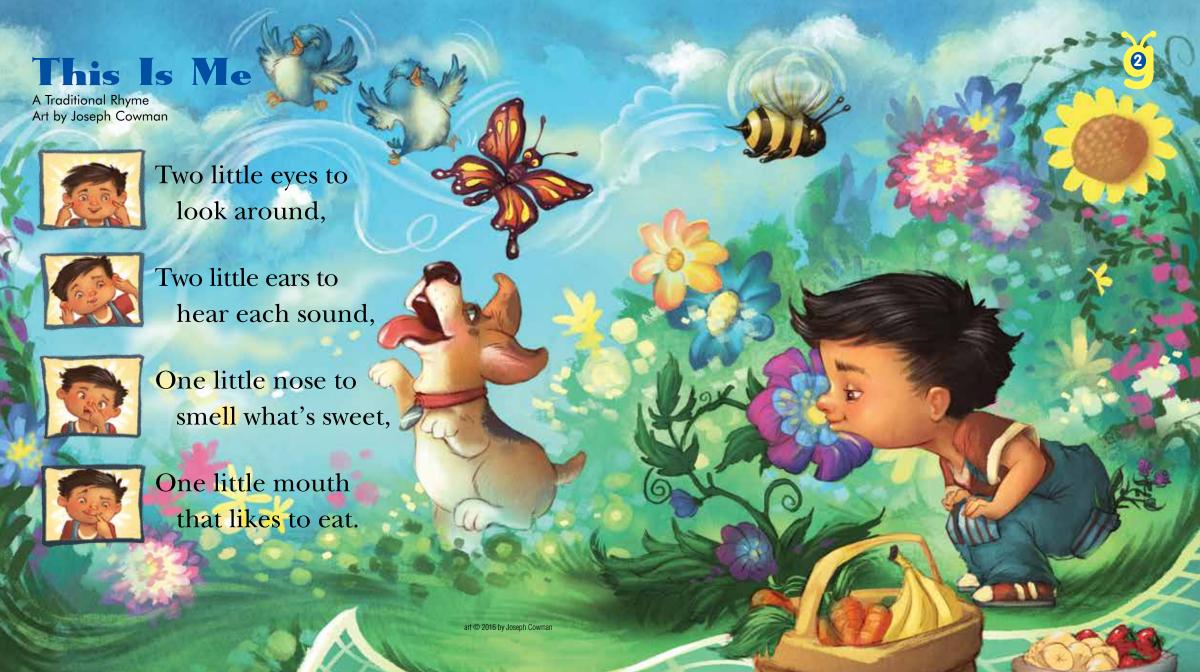

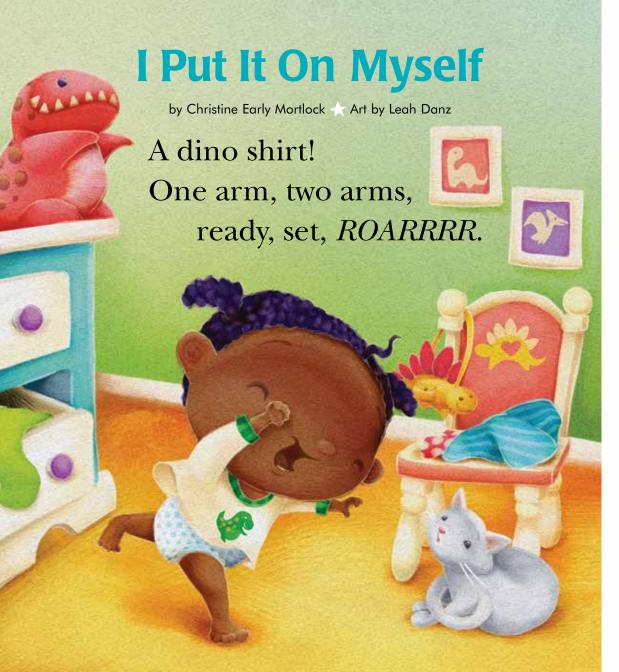

Little Hippo began to feel very small.

Then he saw the ants crawling on the grass. Suddenly, he felt very big!

A stripy skirt!
One foot, two feet,
ready, set, EXPLORE.

The Playground

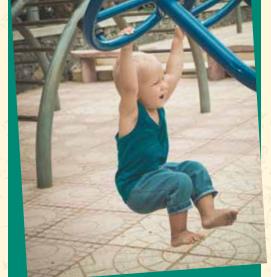

by Emily Granville

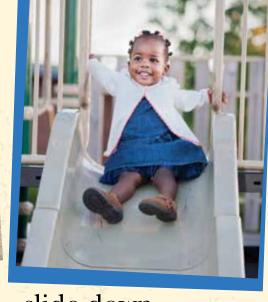

Hip-hip-hooray, it's time to play! At the playground, you can swing to and fro . . .

or seesaw high and low!

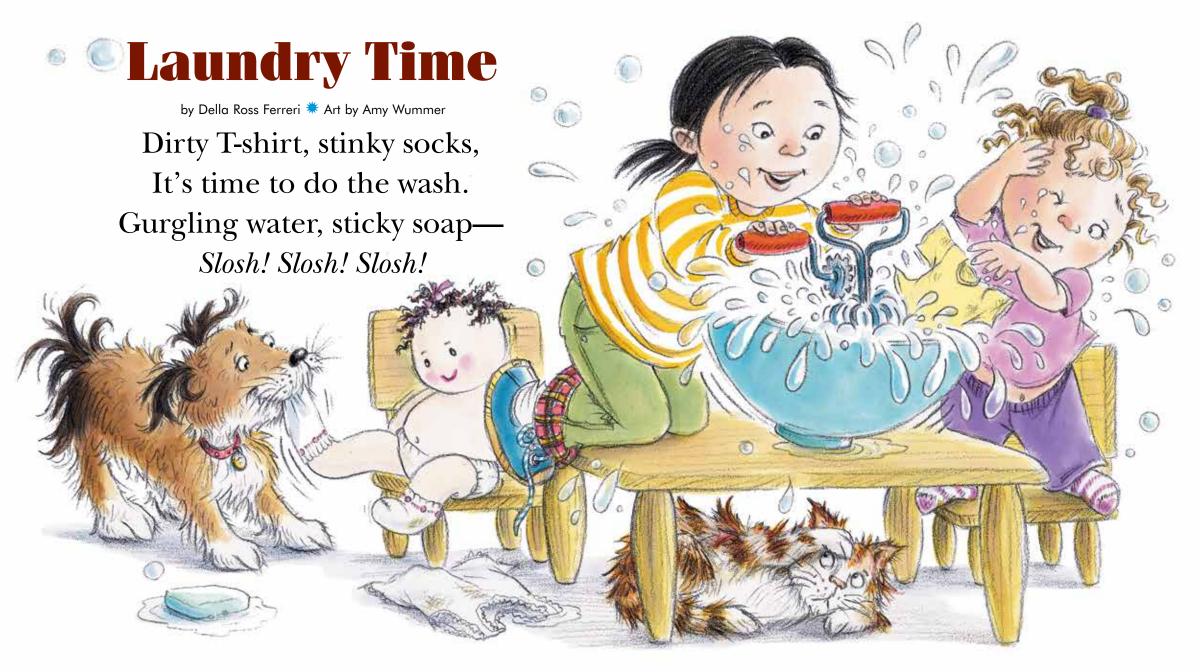

Hop up . . . slide down . . . spin around and around and around!

BABYBUG is for babies who love to be read to—and for adults who love to read to them. Here are a few tips to help you get the most out of this "see what I can do" issue of BABYBUG.

1. Kim and Carrots: While Mommy does laundry, Kim busily works alongside her, washing Carrots's little coat. When that's done, Carrots gets a good scrubbing as well! What is work to an adult is fun to a toddler. Rather than postponing time with your child until after the chores are finished, pause for a moment and consider how he could join you. It may take a bit longer to get things done, but the time spent together is well worth it.

2. This Is Me: Babies are fascinated by faces—yours most of all. Within hours of birth they appear to know the difference between a stranger's face and that of a parent. No matter how many faces babies examine, they're most delighted by the faces of those who love and care for them every day.

3. I Put It On Myself: This poem celebrates a toddler's successful efforts to dress herself. If your little one is learning to get dressed, why not show her the "fancy way" of putting a jacket on? Lay her jacket on its back on the floor. Have your child stand at the collar end. Tell her to put her hands in the sleeves and flip the jacket over her head.
